Foreword

ALMA MATER — to most of us the term is commonly associated with our school song. However, in Latin it signifies “bounteous mother,” given by the Romans to certain goddesses — Ceres, goddess of plenteous harvests and to Cybele, goddess mother of man and giver of the arts — and now applied to schools regarded as the “foster mother” of those who have attended them.

Following this same line of thought, we have chosen gods and goddesses as patrons of the various phases of our school life, while the lines of our school song have been interwoven with our school activities.

ALMA MATER

Our thoughts are held in loving thrall
To this, our honored Hall.
Within these walls we've pondered o'er
The paths that lead to All.

The best that wisdom gives, we got;
The prize belongs to all.
Our loyal friendship's flower divine
That bides in Blue and Gold.

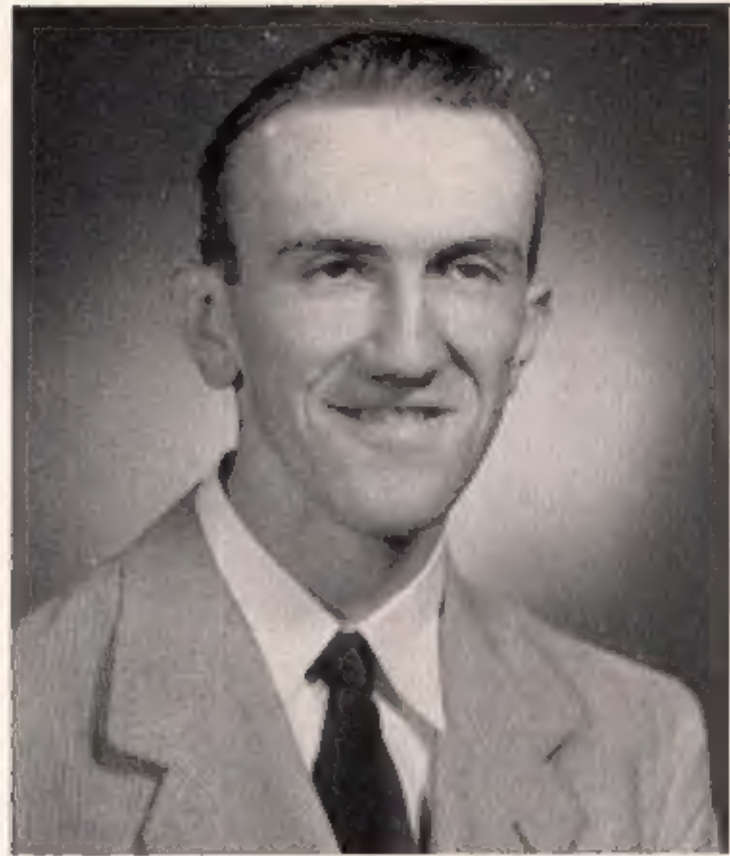

Chorus:

Then here's a rousing shout to her
And to her colors bold.
We'll e'er be true and loyal to
The noble Blue and Gold.

Dedication

PHYLLIS TURNER

JAMES SHEEHAN

With sincere admiration, we, the Class of 1953, dedicate our Muhltobi to two of our classmates, Phyllis Turner and James Sheehan, who have displayed a steadfast determination to complete their high school education despite serious physical handicaps. Now, having succeeded in their efforts, they are being graduated with us this June as esteemed members of the Class of 1953. May we take inspiration from their courage and perseverance.

Faculty

Minerva — goddess of wisdom, to whom the Romans paid tribute, inspired in them the desire for learning so that they might be able to go forth in the world giving others of their understanding and wisdom. She represented the finest ideals — learning, wisdom, justice, and righteous warfare. The arts of peace especially were her particular care. Through her, men were trained in handicrafts; agriculture was made to flourish; and arts and letters were encouraged.

So has our faculty done for us. As we leave these halls we look to these, our inspirers, appreciating how they have worried and struggled with us so that we might be successful when we follow our chosen paths in life.

As we stop and think a moment, many pleasant memories return to us of helpful things they have done. Mr. Boyer, whose guidance as our class adviser helped us over the rough spots in our class ventures . . . the skillful way in which Mrs. Ramsay directed our junior class play and Mr. Koch our senior play . . . Miss Knauss's help in keeping our yearbook plans within the bounds of practicality . . . Miss Rahn's guidance and advice in our vocational problems . . . Mrs. Curley's assistance with the senior write-ups and commencement . . . and Mr. Schmehl, our principal, who was ever striving for our betterment and the improvement of our school.

"The best that wisdom gives, we've got . . ."

New Office Furniture Streamlines School "Hub"

Our busy office staff is the hub of our school from which all major activities and scholastic achievements are begun . . . Mr. Crumbling, our superintendent, together with Mr. Schmehl, our principal, and the board of directors constitute the administrative team . . . the three harried secretaries, care for the myriad of details necessary to the smooth operation of a school district comprising 83 teachers . . . the pay telephone which was installed in the hall helped eliminate some of the traffic in the office . . . the face-lifting of the office, a project of several years, was completed with the installation of attractive and up-to-date office furniture of gray metal.

This is what makes the wheels go round.

Study of English Provides a Means for Self-Expression

The English Department strove to develop our backgrounds in the field of literature and to perfect our skill in oral and written grammar . . . seniors went as far back as the fifth century for their source of literature and eventually arrived at the seventeenth century to read the tragedy of "Hamlet" . . . "Tale of Two Cities" caused many seniors to chew on their well-manicured nails . . . diagraming left many of the senior boys in a state of disgust . . . senior write-ups proved a problem to those who needed descriptive adjectives . . . juniors brought many interesting souvenirs from home and told the stories behind them . . . sophomores stumbled through Portia's famous speech in the "Merchant of Venice".

Mrs. Harris's ninth grade classes found that after talking into the tape recorder they didn't sound quite as they thought . . . freshmen were given their first glimpse of Shakespeare in reading "Julius Caesar" . . . "Water, water everywhere" was chanted by many ninth graders . . . Miss Moyer prepared her eighth graders for their later years by giving them a taste of different languages French, German, and Latin . . . the "Prince and the Pauper" and "Evangeline" were read and analyzed by the pupils in the eighth grade . . . Mrs. Ramsay's seventh grade tots combined study with pleasure by dramatizing stories with puppets . . . technical grammar was disliked by all classes . . . we were impressed with the necessity for adequate self-expression in all our undertakings.

Students Learn to Be Good Citizens in a Democracy

History—a study of the past and the effect it has on the present as well as on the future . . . the goal toward which the teachers in the department strove is—to produce better citizens by giving the students a clearer understanding of past events, politics, and world situations . . . ancient peoples living in the Near East, highlighted especially by Egypt and her Nile, introduced our students to the study of history in grade seven . . . soap carvings of famous Greek architectural treasures made the journey into Greece more realistic . . . eighth graders visited the Ancient World with Marco Polo and sailed to the New World with Columbus and Pizarro . . . they marched from Valley Forge to Gettysburg and listened here to Lincoln's unforgettable classic . . . ninth graders "toured" Pennsbury Manor and went with Penn as he made treaties with the Indians and beat them in athletic contests.

Mathematicians measure flag pole.

Logarithms Mystify Mathematicians

"Calculating" department provided numerical reasoning exercises for all grades . . . courses strove to prove that mathematics develops mental capacity to draw sound conclusions, an ability useful in any situation . . . "greenies" cultivated proficiency in addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division . . . attempted to "conquer" worksheets . . . eighth graders filled their heads with formulas and interest rates . . . they also learned how to handle future bank accounts by writing checks and deposit slips . . . freshmen had choice of General Math, Junior Business, or Algebra I . . . business students "absorbed" details of life insurance and social security.

Wire Recording Aids in Improving Pronunciation

One of the great obstacles to world peace and understanding will have been overcome when the people of the world can understand each other's languages . . . the study of Latin serves as the basis for the mastery of the modern languages . . . Spanish and German are the modern languages most useful in commerce, diplomacy, and culture . . . our English language is composed of elements from Latin and German languages . . . this "Latin in English" is emphasized in first year Latin by having the students clip and bring in words with Latin derivations they have spotted in various publications . . . second year Latinists dwelt on vocabulary building and mastered Latin prefixes . . . Annette Kiesling, 11-2, learned to say "good-bye" in two languages this year as the lone student taking both first year Spanish and German . . . "That can't be me talking," and "Oh, no!" were among the comments that issued from the Spanish and German students when they improved pronunciation by the use of the wire recorder . . . combined department staged the annual foreign language assembly program.

Science Student Inadvertently Paints Lab Ceiling

In three laboratories Muhlenberg's amateur scientists made their discoveries and experiments . . . films on subject matter made learning easier . . . "lab" periods alleviated the regular course of study . . . ninth graders made and explained each experiment and then recorded it in their notebooks . . . became acquainted with the different branches of science . . . biologists dissected small animals and put down in drawings what they saw . . . made attractive notebooks from material gathered from class lectures and drawings . . . junior physics students were baffled by "practical application" problems . . . movies and laboratory periods assisted them through the course . . . senior chemists learned what matter is and its composition . . . "Stink Bombs" and minor explosions, such as the one in which a mixture of copper sulphate hit the ceiling, lent excitement to the course.

Guidance Department Interviews Parents and Students

Parents and students discussed the students' vocational intentions at weekly interviews with guidance counselor . . . seniors took achievement tests comparing them to other high school seniors and college freshmen . . . preparations were made for College Board and scholarship examinations . . . interested seniors took the Bell Telephone Company employment tests and the U. S. Employment Service tests . . . the American Casualty Company gave screening tests for applicants for keypunch training . . . seventh and eighth grades were reviewed for present school success, further training, and future vocations.

Library Boasts New Furniture

Modern, blond mahogany furniture replaced the library's well-worn tables and chairs . . . new bookcases provided another convenience for the students . . . a spacious desk provided the needed space for a busy librarian's varied tasks . . . venetian blinds also proved to be welcome additions to the roomy, attractive library . . . capable girls assisted librarian during the busiest hours of the day . . . 6,500 volumes aided students with book reports, weekly oral reports, and reference reports . . . monthly magazines also filled shelves for the enjoyment and education of the students.

Visitors Envy Art Department's Layout

Wonderful physical art set-up . . . aluminum sinks, spacious shelves and cupboards, excellent desks, venetian blinds, and asphalt tile flooring contribute to ideal working facilities . . . visitors view the layout with envy . . . colorful posters on safety and health rules decorate the walls . . . picture houses were made by scale drawings . . . individual creativeness shown in silhouette pictures and finger paintings . . . clay figurines and wood carvings were two results of student's imaginations . . . chip carvings adorned the shelves . . . went from painting stage scenery to making three-dimensional paper sculptures . . . sketching of students' own environment was used as a means of pictorial expression . . . widely diversified schedule kept students busy . . . an art club, composed of junior high enthusiasts and directed by the student art teachers, specialized in soap carvings, crayon etching, water coloring, and puppet making.

Driver Education Emphasizes Sportsmanship on the Road

Aim of Driver Education is to familiarize the student with correct and safe methods of driving under the guidance of a competent instructor . . . students were taught sportsmanlike driving in both class work and behind the wheel . . . self-control, correct traffic habits, high-quality skills, and good social attitude are important to driving . . . an acquaintance with the mechanics of the car encouraged better care of the car and more efficient operation . . . students spent two periods a week behind the wheel for one semester and one period a week of classroom instruction for the entire year . . . Mr. Delp, being called in-to the service in February, was replaced by Mr. Stalek.

The work of the janitors "is never done" . . . they can be seen working diligently from early in the morning until late at night . . . efforts are shown in the appearance of the school . . . school bus drivers of Muhlenberg have the very important task of providing transportation for students of rural areas . . . stormy weather proves their dependability . . . also transported students for music and athletic activities.

Janitor executes daily task.

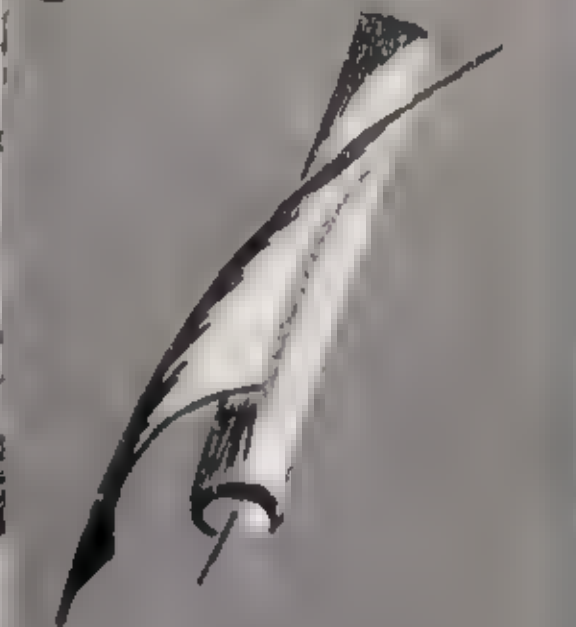

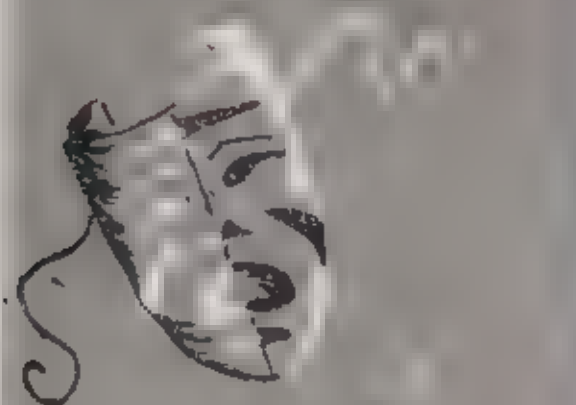

Underclassmen

Phaethon, the God of ambition, was eager to learn the ways of life. He wanted to follow the pursuit of his father, Apollo, in driving the Sun Chariot; however, unwilling to heed instruction and the advice of his father, who knew he was unfitted for the position to which he aspired, he brought about his own destruction.

Underclassmen also aspire to follow in the ways of their predecessors and to drive the senior chariot, but unlike Phaethon, we know that we must be properly prepared for the path we shall pursue. Those who enter these halls of education come with hope in their hearts. Seventh graders learn the fundamentals to lead them on their path. Participating in assemblies and clubs besides their everyday studies, the eighth graders climb to a new level of attainment. Choosing courses in ninth grade is a task, but their choice is governed by what they feel will be best for their futures. The first year of academic students loves trying. Tenth graders choose a career, and make plans for a Soph Hop, as they call it. The eleventh graders prove their worth by acquiring class sweaters and pins. The twelfth graders plan for graduation not only as intent, but as accomplishment for their year and their future life.

Activities

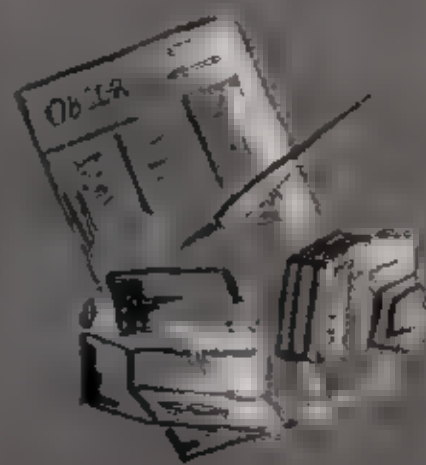

In their advanced civilization the Romans found it necessary to deviate from daily toil, so they developed many cultural and social activities. The nine Muses were their symbols in music, art, poetry, dancing, drama, literature, and science. Associated with these patrons of arts and letters was a famous winged steed named Pegasus which had been presented to the Muses and which even today is connected with the idea of literature.

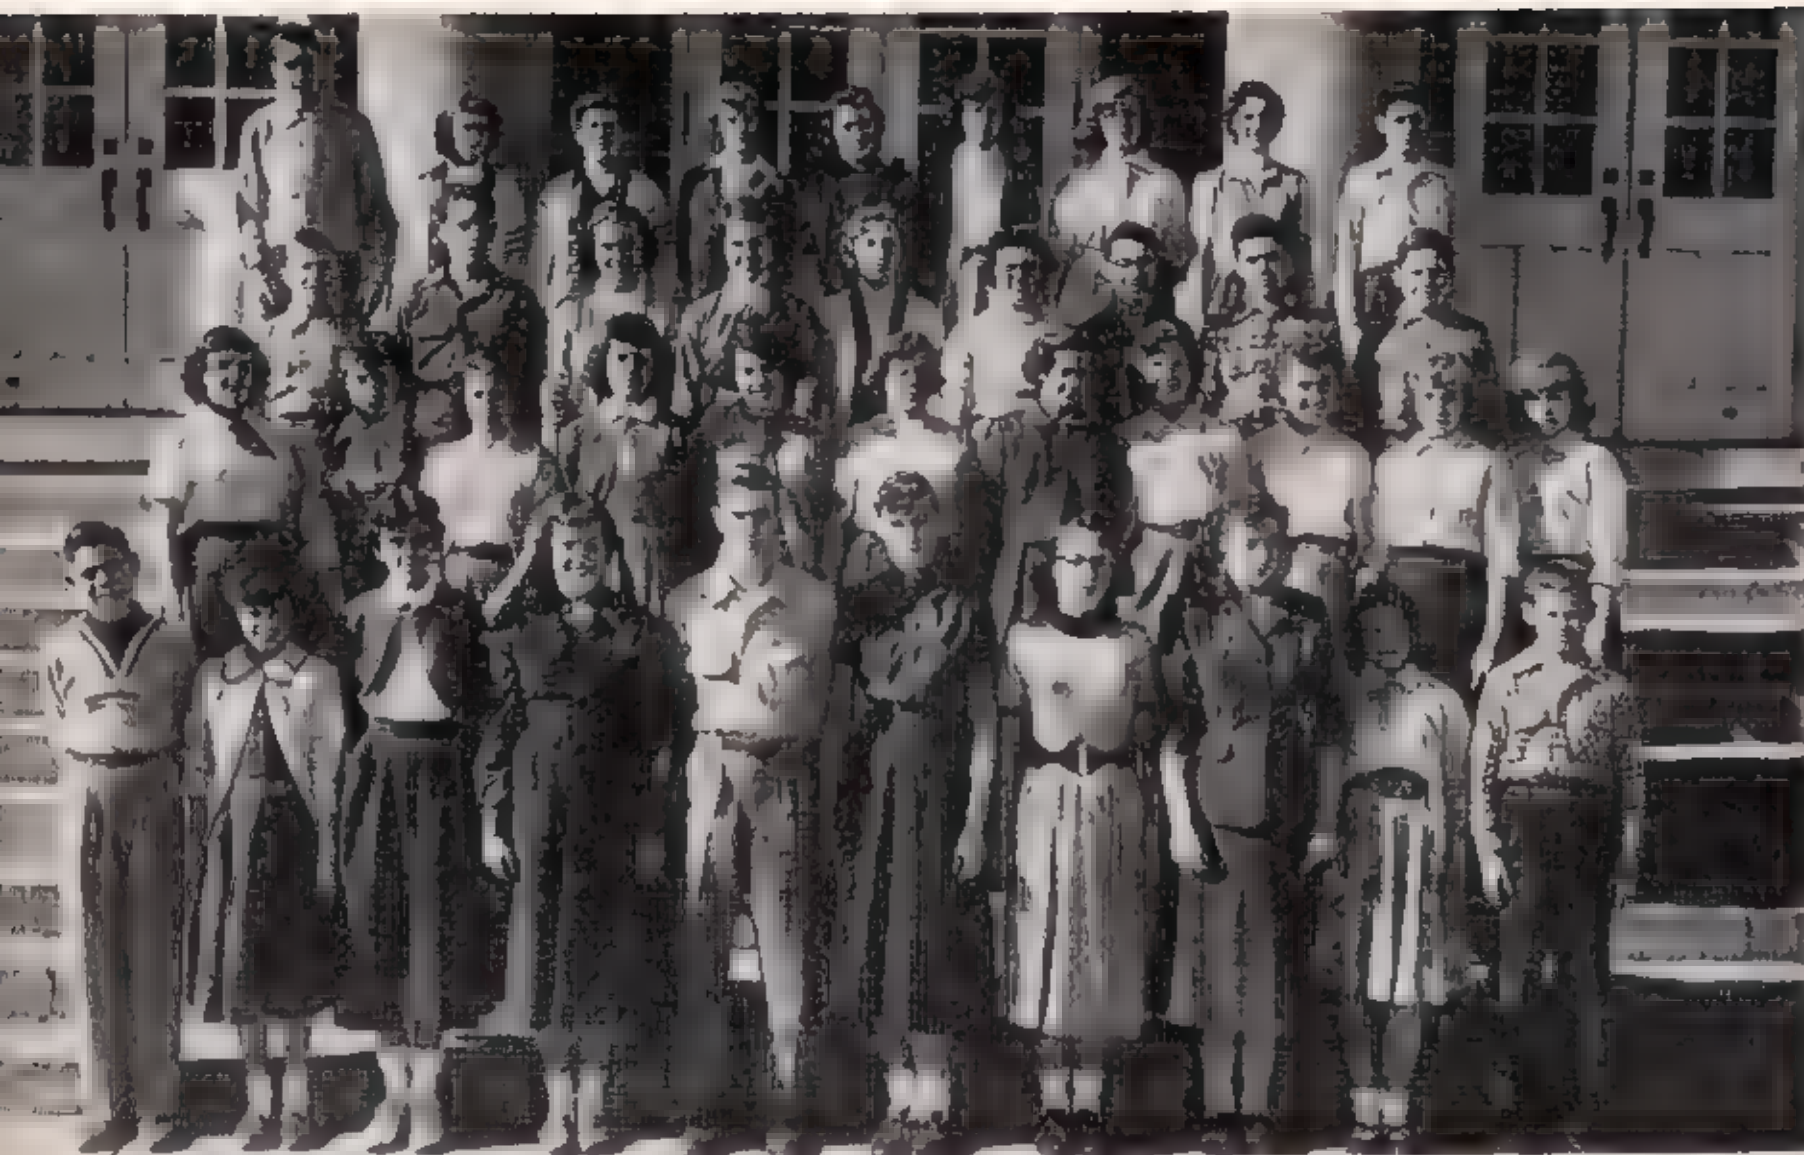

These activities, combined with many more, are evidenced in our schools today. Among the events we recall with special pride are the U.N. Day program sponsored by Student Council . . . triangular debating Muhlenberg, Kutztown, Shillington . . . Miss Horton's warbler's sleep walking to "dawn patrol" . . . band—ever present and ready to play for any and every occasion . . . the unseen stage crew behind every production . . . newsy Observer issues—what work was put into them! . . . our heartaches and problems before every dance . . . the excitement and projects present at Student Council presidential election time . . . combined Y-Teens and Hi-Y parties—what fun at those initiations . . . "out of this world" comedians at Muhl Revue this year . . . loyal friendships blossom forth as the students work together in their various extra-curricular schedules and enjoy the social agenda of the school . . . will we ever forget these friendships?

*"Our loyal friendship's flower divine
That bides in blue and gold."*

Athletics

Centuries ago, the Olympic Games were instituted in honor of Jupiter, ruler of all the gods. They were held every four years, beginning in 776 B. C. The most famous athletes in the whole world competed for the distinction of being first in their respective fields.

In the same spirit, competitive school sports today, while staged primarily to develop teamwork and physical health, also have a keynote of honor. Contestants strive to bring honor to their school and to gain the admiration of the entire student body. Likewise, each pupil shares in the chagrin of defeat or the glory of victory.

Our athletic teams this year had their share of defeats and victories . . . chartreuse football pants "made for" a colorful crew of football heroes at our game with Boyertown when the cleaner dumped them into the wrong vats . . . what excitement after the team defeated arch rival Shillington . . . the varsity basketball game with Hamburg was a heartbreaking thriller as they came from behind to defeat our cagemen by one field goal . . . Muhl basketballers gave Kutztown champions a "hard time" in first half of the return engagement . . . pedagogues modeled every style of dress at their basketball?? game, from Mr. J. B. White's sweatsuit to Mr. Koch's "white tie and tails."

As we proceed further into ancient mythology, we meet Janus, the two-faced God. True to his name, Janus was believed to be able to look in two directions at the same time. He is the God of beginnings—especially of good beginnings which insure good endings. Hence, he is represented as facing both ways, for the Romans believed that beginnings and endings were all of the same piece and that an undertaking ill begun could not achieve success.

For some of us seniors, our scholastic career is ending, for others it is journeying on. Still others are facing toward careers in the commercial world.

Looking back into our years at Muhlenberg High School, we can recall some of the many incidents we experienced. We shared our fun with Ilse Lange, who came to America from Germany for one year of schooling. We presented her with a class ring to remember us by. "Ellie" Snyder's going to Hamburg to cheer at a basketball game being played at Wernersville was one of the humorous occurrences during our senior year. Jim Boyer brought instrumental recognition to M.T.H.S. by being chosen for State Band and Orchestra.

For the first time a formal outdoor commencement on the athletic field was planned instead of the pageant form used in previous years.

Class History

Let us project a young man of the class of 1953 back into the days when Roman civilization was at its height. His daily memorandums when he was a boy of 12 would undoubtedly have referred to his voluntary grammar school work under a teacher who was usually a slave of the family. But, brought back to the present day, this same boy of 12 entered Muhlenberg Township High School and filled his diary with his wonder of the strange environment and the competition when we "greenies" held our treasure hunt at the museum under the direction of Miss Staudt. At the close of the year Patricia Reitz and Kenneth Greenawald were selected for the Empire Steel awards.

As he gained confidence as well as knowledge, he advanced to the eighth grade. Here's an interesting entry he made—our class showed its first signs of cooperation when we planned a Hallowe'en party in the gymnasium complete with punch and potato chips. The American Legion prizes for the outstanding students in eighth grade were presented to Jeanette Weller and Kenneth Greenawald.

Ninth grade! As a freshman he was greeted with his first taste of the various courses. Our young man remembers an "A" he received on his civics notebook and, as a future linguist, he studied Latin and the life of the Romans. How he wished he were among the privileged class members who had a day off from school to journey to junior county chorus. Patricia Reitz and Kenneth Greenawald were the recipients of the Senior Woman's Club awards.

At the age when, as a Roman lad, he would possibly have traveled to Greece for a higher education, he joined in the confusion of organizing our class and planning the "Soph Hop." By now he was among many of the class warbling at Mixed Chorus rehearsals. And the time he and other "recruits" went through Hi-Y initiation! Patricia Reitz and Kenneth Greenawald were awarded the Maidencreek Hosiery prizes.

Advancing to his junior year, he proudly sported one of the snappy class jackets our class inaugurated. Our dramatists presented a terrific junior class play, "Tattletale." To end the year we planned a trip to Riverview Beach Park and here our diary-keeper has also made a note that he had a super time at the Junior-Senior prom at the Reading Country Club. Junior Woman's Club awards went to Patricia Reitz and Kenneth Greenawald.

As a member of the 25th graduating class of M.T.H.S., he helped slave on our yearbook and to present our senior class play, "Seventeen Is Terrific." R.

Class History (Continued)

James Boyer represented us at State Band and Orchestra. Except for Luther Schlott replacing Nancy Shupp, our tenth grade veep, our class officers remained the same throughout our senior high years. National Honor Society inducted only seniors this year and claimed ten of our class. Wasn't our prom dreamy? None of us wanted it to end. Our Commencement, the first outdoor formal graduation in the history of Muhlenberg, completed our public schooling, and we left these portals at the same age as our young Roman man was ready to take his place in public life.
